

Helicopter Flight Training Financing

The financial "hurdle" is the most difficult to overcome when you decide to become a Professional Helicopter Pilot (or a Professional Airplane Pilot). In short, there are simply VERY few viable options available with a personal resource or a long term training plan the only avenues we have seen truly functional. Albeit so, the two entities below may have options still available - it will take the students effort to determine the status of each.

The Pilot Finance programs are designed for flight students on a part time training schedule - one to five lessons per week. Effective rates as low as 9% for Preferred Customers who have a reasonable debt-to-income ratio and a good credit record. The maximum amount financed is limited only by the applicant's income, debts, and credit record.

AOPA and Bank of America have teamed up to provide funding for flight training. They offer predictable payments and no annual fee. No collateral is needed. Financing is available for amounts of up to $25,000.
